1. At 1930 on 12 January 1955, a Soviet soldier wearing black-bordered blue epaulets fired 21 rounds from his submachine gun through the door and windows of the restaurant at Dellgow railroad station, where he had got drunk before. Subsequently, he was overpowered by a railroad policeman and a railroad official. From a subsequent interrogation it was inferred that the soldier had been on guard duty at the artillery equipment park and had been missing since 1230 from his post. No persons were injured by the incident.
